Class Poem

*A trifle weary, a little sad,
Reminiscent — and yet quite glad,
We reach the top, and poised and still,
We stand here, breathless, memories fill
Our throbbing hearts. We turn and gaze
Quietly back across the days
That, spun together, made those years
Of hearty laughter; silent tears.*

*Day by day we've built our dreams,
Life's foundation, crossed with beams
Of knowledge and the love of truth—
Into a temple, in which youth
May live and grow. How carefully
Our thoughts were guided, so that we might
Learn more than what volumes give,
They taught us truly how to live.*

THE CLASS HISTORY

1964! And, the entire nation is agog at the news that Dr. Joe Glover, the greatest inventive genius of the century, has at last completed his amazing machine to turn time backward. The initial demonstration of the new invention will be given in Dr. Glover's hometown of Wilmington, North Carolina with the class of '44 of New Hanover High participating.

Those alumni, of whom some are now famous national and international figures, have been gathering for days ahead of time, all eager to relive their carefree school days.

Two of them, one, a renowned foreign correspondent, Claude Jordan; the other, a well-known Broadway actress, Kathleen Guthrie, are standing on the corner of 13th and Market Streets reminiscing before the eventful demonstration.

"Remember what a fresh bunch of freshmen we were?" Jordan asked.

"I certainly do. All of our teachers said we were the most irresponsible group they'd ever seen," Kay answered quickly. "We went up the 'down' steps and don't they all—we dropped in on senior classes when we went to 211 instead of 311, and we made ourselves generally obnoxious — to the upperclassmen anyway. And remember our first election?"

"Yes. Let's see, we elected Bill McIlwain to lead us that time, I believe. He made a good president, too. Really looked out for our interests."

They walked down 13th Street toward Princess.

"Look, there's the new gym," Kay suddenly cried, "only I guess it isn't so new now. Remember the uproar those workmen made dropping iron beams and bricks and anything else they could?"

"I sure do, but the old place really is a credit to the school now. On the whole that first year was pretty eventful, but I guess more really happened during our sophomore year than any other time."

"Yes," Kay agreed meditatively, "because that was the year the United States entered World War II. I don't think I'll ever forget that December 8th when the whole school gathered to hear President Roosevelt's speech asking Congress for a declaration of war. It must have been quite a sight to see grim, set faces of all those boys and girls as they listened to his long-remembered words."

"And just a few days later N. H. H. S. declared war on the Axis," Jordan added, "but that's not all that made it eventful, for it was during that year that we adopted our new constitution. Come to think of it, Gerald Baker was the last sophomore president elected under the old one. And then came June and we became full-fledged Juniors."

"Didn't we have fun our Junior year? We went to assembly with the Seniors and really enjoyed it even though we did have to sit still while they went out."

"And remember our first class play? It was called 'What About Betty', wasn't it? Everybody expected it to be a colossal flop, but we really surprised them. It was one of the best plays in years. And then there was that wonderful Junior-Senior we gave for the graduating class."

"It was loads of fun," she agreed. "I loved those cute little gifts they gave to some of the most outstanding seniors. We surprised everyone that year too by electing a girl as our class president. But Byah Thomason was a pretty swell girl, wasn't she?"

"She really was. And she made a grand Student Body President the next year when B. D. Albright had to resign because Uncle Sam called him.

"Our senior year was really the year of years. N. H. H. S. again expanded and took over Isaac Bear for commercial classes. And just think how proud we were to at last be able to use those front steps—the Senior Steps! And then there was our Senior play. We surely enjoyed that."

Jordan broke in. "That Junior class certainly outdid themselves when they gave us our Junior-Senior. Everyone had a marvelous time that night. And then came June and we graduated. Gosh, I hated to leave the old place."

"Me too. I wish we could do it all over again."

"Well, we can! Joe's machine is going to make it possible."

"Then what are we waiting for?"

And walking slowly, they joined the crowd moving toward the N. H. H. S. auditorium.

MARY EMMA HUMPHREY.
